Why invest in PBDC?

Income from BDCs

This ETF invests in business development companies (BDCs), which historically have generated an attractive level of income. Most BDCs hold a portfolio of loans to small and midsize companies and distribute most of the income they earn to investors.

Access to private market companies

A BDC is a registered investment company that invests in smaller private companies, similar to venture capital or private equity funds. Public BDCs are equity securities that are typically listed on national exchanges, and they typically own portfolios composed primarily of private market loans.

Active investment process

The fund's disciplined investment process evaluates a BDC's liability structure, dividend policy, fee structure, and underwriting philosophy.

* About operating expenses. A fund that invests in BDCs discloses the expenses of the BDCs as acquired fund fees and expenses (AFFEs). AFFEs make the expense ratios look much higher for this fund compared with other equity funds, but it is important to remember that AFFEs are indirect expenses not borne by the fund. AFFEs are shown as a line item in an expense table to distinguish them from the fees of the fund. Under SEC rules, the fund must report a total expense ratio that combines the fees paid directly out of the fund's assets (direct fees) and the proportional expense ratios of the funds in which it invests.

† Other expenses are based on estimated amounts for the current fiscal year.

‡ Acquired fund fees and expenses are based on estimated amounts for the current fiscal year.

*The S&P BDC Index is an unmanaged index designed to track leading business development companies that trade on major U.S. exchanges. You cannot invest directly in an index.

Shares of any ETF are bought and sold at market price (not NAV), may trade at a discount or premium to NAV, and are not individually redeemed from the fund. Brokerage commissions will reduce returns. Key risks for each fund are below.

Consider these risks before investing: Business development companies (BDCs) generally invest in less mature U.S. private companies or thinly traded U.S. public companies, which involves greater risk than well-established publicly traded companies. The fund will be sensitive to, and its performance will depend to a greater extent on, the overall condition of the financials sector.

The use of leverage by BDCs magnifies gains and losses on amounts invested and increases the risks associated with investing in BDCs. A BDC may make investments with greater risk of volatility and loss of principal than other investment options and may also be highly speculative and aggressive. Certain BDCs may also be difficult to value since many of the assets of BDCs do not have readily ascertainable market values.

As a non-diversified fund, the fund invests in fewer issuers and is more vulnerable than a more broadly diversified fund to fluctuations in the values of the securities it holds. Our investment techniques, analyses, and judgments may not produce the outcome we intend. The investments we select for the fund may not perform as well as other securities that we do not select for the fund. We, or the fund's other service providers, may experience disruptions or operating errors that could have a negative effect on the fund. You can lose money by investing in the fund.

You should consider the fund's investment objectives, risks, charges, and expenses carefully before you invest. This and other important information is contained in the fund's prospectus available on putnam.com or by calling 1-833-228-5577. Please read carefully before you invest.
